

Data Analytics Intern

Company Description

Travel re-imagined. Headquartered in New York City and hand-made with unsurpassed Italian craftsmanship in Florence, Italy, Paravel creates the world's most resilient canvas luggage and travel accessories. Exclusively available at www.TourParavel.com, Paravel has been featured in Vogue, Conde Naste Traveler, The New York Times, Architectural Digest, The Wall Street Journal, Oprah Magazine, The New Post, and more.

Paravel is interested in bringing on interns who are excited to learn and apply themselves in a new kind of setting. We want people who are curious, motivated to work as a part of a dynamic team, and are eager to do a whole lot more than get coffee.

Description of Role

- Meet a fascinating company. Learn about the fashion industry and direct-to-consumer business model shadowing the Director of Operations and Strategy. See if consumer goods and the startup atmosphere are right for you.
- Become the expert. Work on data collection, collection, and organization projects in Marketing, Operations, and Strategy.
- Hone your craft in an applied setting. Practice different business applications for quantitative surveys, modeling, and financial planning.
- See your insights put to work. Own projects from inception and initial research ad provide analytical support through implementation.

Requirements

- You should have some experience with quantitative modes of thinking (coursework in statistics, mathematics, economics, etc.).
- You should enjoy using data to drive informed and objective decisions.
- You should be scrappy, low-ego, and curious.
- You should be excited to get your hands dirty, not just pad your Résumé.
- Role can be completed in-person in New York City; Rochester, NY; or remotely.

Interested candidates should submit a cover letter and résumé to Will@TourParavel.com.